ABSTRACT

Health insurance is an insurance product which covers medical and surgical expenses of an insured individual. It reimburses the expenses incurred due to illness or injury or pays the cost specific of the insured individual directly. It helps, approximately 25 percent of the insured pay cost of health care expenditures that come from all health insurance sources and also provides a safety net for those who are covered in health insurance. It is a financial product which helps to protect the insured from financial loss in the event of a health emergency. Such health insurance covers the cost of health care services.
